

As we can't go to Hampton Court for our Tudor Topic, we had an afternoon in school investigating Hampton Court and why the Tudors explored move of the world. In our 'Opening Up The World' lesson we explored Hampton Court for materials and items that didn't come from England, and then looked at the many explorers during this period in history. We looked at how their world view changed and what you need to be an explorer during this time. The children investigated different items that were bought back from explorations during this time, including the potato! They had a great afternoon!