

Postcard from my teacher

Dear Oak,

It is July. Can you believe it? I seriously cannot quite understand how we have got to July seemingly so quickly and I am thinking about the end of the school year and making some plans for that with Miss Green.

I hope that you enjoyed watching all of the teachers' videos this week. I loved some of the stories they read. Do you think I should buy one of the books to read to my new class in September? If so, please let me know which ones.

I have been revisiting an old skill this week: skipping! Ruby and Misbah invited me to join in with them, so I did. I am very rusty at it, but was determined to improve from the 8 skips in the big skipping rope on Monday. Good news: by Wednesday this had improved to 10 skips; maybe tomorrow it will be 12 skips.

I am looking forward to a catch up with my old university friends tonight. We haven't seen each other virtually for a month. I am bracing myself for the usual teasing. Did I tell you that the boys once made a pretend cat flap to my flat for me as I am so small? I still haven't quite got them back for that....

Take care of yourselves and those around you.

Love from Mrs Phillips
