

Postcard from my teacher

Dear Beech,

I hope all is well with you and your families and that you have been able to enjoy the beautiful weather lately. I'm still waiting impatiently for my sunflower seeds to sprout!

This week, I've been doing a bit of baking and cooking with my daughter. We had some over-ripe bananas, so one of the things we made was banana bread. Apparently, we were not alone as my daughter tells me the internet is full of banana bread recipes and people showing off their bakes!

I am learning too. I have started an online course for teachers about Autism. It's a condition which affects some adults and children, and there are many misunderstandings about it. I am enjoying finding out lots of new and fascinating facts. I hope you have all been finding interesting ways to keep your brains busy and learn new things!

Stay safe and keep busy.
